From November 10 to November 12, 2022, the college placement office arranged a three-day soft skill seminar on critical thinking and problem solving. Principal Dr.P.S.N. Murthy addressed everyone at the session and thanked the speaker for giving a program organized by the department of mechanical engineering and placement cell.

The resource speaker presented a brief review of soft skills and how to enhance them, as well as how this program can benefit students, before moving on to critical thinking and problem solving. Improving our critical thinking and problem-solving skills has several benefits, including improved decision-making and better productivity.

Objective:

Good critical thinkers can draw reasonable conclusions from a set of information, and discriminate between useful and less useful details to solve problems or make decisions. Employers prioritize the ability to think critically find out why, plus see how you can demonstrate that you have this ability throughout the job application process. As soft skills go, critical thinking and problem-solving have a lot in common. These skills give your employees more freedom and confidence in their own choices. Critical thinking and problem-solving also help your employees embrace and welcome new challenges.

For example, the average employee will find themselves constantly asking for help or not solving problems on their own. When improving your critical thinking and problem-solving skills, the goal is to have your employees come up with solutions on the fly and feel confident doing so.

Examples given by the resource person include

The circumstances that demand critical thinking vary from industry to industry. Some examples include:

- A triage nurse feedback forms and uses this information to develop a customer service training session for employees. analyzes the cases at hand and decides the order by which the patients should be treated.
- A plumber evaluates the materials that would best suit a particular job.
- Attorney reviews evidence and devises a strategy to win a case or to decide whether to settle out of court.
- A manager analyzes customer

PROGRAMME REPORT

Name of the Programme	: A Three Day Soft Skill Programme on “How to Build Self Confidence”
Date	: 10-02-2021 to 12-02-2021
Resource Person	: Mr. Prasanth
Name of coordinator	: Mrs.Ch.Bharathi, Assoc. Professor HOD of EEE, GIITS
Number of Students attended	: 40
Venue	: Class Room F23

From 10-02-2021 to 12-02-2021, our college Placement cell organized a three-day soft skill programme on critical thinking and problem solving. Principal Dr.T.Venkateswara Rao inaugurated the session by welcoming the speaker for presenting the programme.

The resource speaker in this session described what self-confidence is and why it is important. He was taught how to believe in yourself and how to project that belief to others in order to be more effective and happier in his life and job. But it's not always easy to believe in yourself, especially if you're naturally self-critical or if others put you down. Self-assurance entails having faith in your own judgment, capabilities, and abilities. About appreciating oneself and feeling worthy, despite your flaws or what others think about you. Self-confidence is essential in practically every part of our lives, but many individuals struggle to obtain it. Unfortunately, this can create a vicious circle: those who lack self-confidence are less likely to succeed.

Resource person addressed to students about three ways to improve their self-confidence.

1. Build Confident Habits

To develop and improve your self-esteem, aim to develop good habits and break bad ones. Regular exercise and a healthy diet can dramatically improve your physical and mental health. And studies have shown that getting a good night's sleep is linked with increased optimism and self-esteem. Working on your personal branding can also help. If you project a positive image of your authentic self, you'll likely start to receive the positive feedback that's so important to your self-confidence.

2. Review Past Achievements

Your self-confidence will increase when you're able to say, "I can do this, and here's the evidence." As part of your Personal SWOT Analysis, you'll have identified things that you're good at, based on your past achievements. List the 10 things that you're most proud of in an "achievement log." Then use them to make positive affirmations about what you can do. These statements are particularly powerful if you tend to undermine your confidence with negative self-talk.

3. Set Confidence-Boosting Goals

Setting and achieving goals and seeing how far you've come are key ways to develop self-confidence. Use your Personal SWOT Analysis to set goals that play to your strengths, minimize your weaknesses, and take advantage of your opportunities. When you've identified the major goals, you want to achieve, clarify the first steps you need to take. Make sure that they're small steps, taking no longer than an hour to do. This will get the ball rolling and improve your confidence through the achievement of appropriate goals.

Learning Outcomes;

Being at your best when it counts the most

Motivating or persuading others.

Having personal power

Emitting a more positive attitude

Feeling valued.

Rising to the top.

Being happier.

Confident people tend to be happier and more contented with their lives than people who have low self-confidence. Increasing personal energy and motivation to take action. Enhanced confidence boosts your positive energy, which gives you more motivation and active energy to achieve your personal and work goals and your dreams. The more highly motivated and energized you are, the more likely to take on challenges.

A Three-Day Soft Skill Programme on “How to Build Self Confidence”

This course was very useful to the students and their feedback is in positive. The management And Principal of GIITS thanked to the resource person and participants for making the program successful.

TPO gave the formal vote of thanks at end of the program

From January 29 to January 31, 2020, our college placement cell and the department of ECE organized a three-day soft skill training on critical thinking and problem solving. Dr.T.Venkateswararo, principal, officially inaugurated the session and thanked the speaker for giving a program.

Professional skills are soft skills that can help professionals become better leaders, solve problems at work, resolve conflicts and enable the team and personal growth. While technical skills help professionals perform their responsibilities and duties, these skills help them build interpersonal relationships, appear confident, adapt to situations and represent their organisation well. Hiring managers look for these skills in candidates as they help professionals work in team settings and help the company grow.

Examples of Professional Skills;

Here are some skills that can help professionals improve their performance at work

Communication; The ability to communicate well is one of the most important skills required by professionals across industries. This skill helps them exchange information effectively with their colleagues, juniors, senior management and also their customers. Being able to communicate well can help build strong interpersonal relationships at work and can also help convey messages easily. Along with being able to communicate verbally, non-verbal communication is also equally important for professionals to succeed. This can help them write emails, create reports, make memos and exchange ideas through messages. To improve communication skills, professionals can enroll in a business communication course that teaches verbal and non-verbal communication in the workplace.

Emotional intelligence; Emotional intelligence can help you understand your emotions and that of others well. It can help you perceive what a person may feel in a given situation and treat them accordingly. This is one of the most important leadership qualities that can also affect the way your team feels about your leadership and the organization. This skill can help professionals in social settings by helping them identify appropriate behaviors. If you want to develop this skill, you can focus on developing some relevant skills like active listening, empathy, sympathy and self-awareness. You can also read good books on emotional intelligence written by renowned authors to understand the concept and identify different techniques for developing this skill

Team Work; Even though professionals may lead teams, it is also important for them to work in teams with different people. They may work with their coworkers or seniors on certain projects or get involved in team activities to ensure their team delivers the work on time. This requires professionals to have a team spirit in them and to be receptive to diverse opinions. The first step while developing this skill is to work on your communication and interpersonal skills. You can also participate in clubs, organize team outings and volunteer for team-oriented activities.

Adaptability; Professionals may face different types of situations and problems throughout their careers. It is important for professionals to be flexible so that they can adapt to every situation and find a solution. Some ways of improving this skill are by exercising your problem-solving skills and practicing mindfulness.

Self confidence; It is important for professionals to stay motivated and dedicated even in difficult situations so that they can succeed in spite of hardships and failures. Employers look for candidates who can stay determined and face challenging situations at work without feeling disheartened or demotivated. Such employees can motivate teams, lead them and help team members increase their performance gradually. You can develop this skill by thinking about the larger objectives of your efforts and the final goals

How To Develop These Skills The resource person clarifies as follows

1. Practice your skills; Practicing your skills as often as possible is of the best ways of developing your skills. Try to practice your skills by including them in your daily interactions and activities. You can practice your communication skills by engaging in conversations with those around you. Try solving puzzles in your free time to develop your problem-solving abilities and decision-making skills. When you attend leadership training or any other skill-based training programmes, make sure you practice the teachings by applying them at your workplace.

2. Observe other professionals; you can also improve your skills by observing other professionals at work. These professionals can be your seniors or coworkers. Observe how they handle their daily interactions, resolve conflicts, organize their tasks and manage their time. If you like some of their actions or ways, try to emulate their behaviors in similar situations.

3. Attend workshops and conferences; Workshops and conferences can be a great opportunity to learn new skills and meet experts on any subject. If there is a particular skill that you want to learn, look for workshops that can help you develop the skill. Such gatherings are also a great networking opportunity and can help you meet other professionals with similar interests.

4. Find a mentor; mentor can help you improve your skills by offering valuable feedback and opinions. If you know a senior professional from any industry, you can ask them to become your mentor and help you improve your skills. Focus on asking questions that can help you gain insights about different skills and develop new perspectives. You can present different hypothetical situations to your mentor and understand how they handle them. You can then try to apply their advice when similar situations occur.

5. Ask for feedback An effective way of developing your skills is by asking for feedback. You can ask your managers, seniors at work, colleagues or family members and friends for feedback on your skills. This can help you identify your strengths and weaknesses. Even if you may not agree with some feedback, this exercise can also help you learn how to accept feedback.

Organisational skills can help professionals improve their productivity and efficiency by streamlining their workflow. They can use these skills to organise their work area so that they can find things easily. They can also apply their organisational skills to manage their schedules, priorities tasks, allocate resources, plan for unforeseen events and create a workflow. Our college Placement cell organized A Three day Soft skill program on Integrity skills was conducted from 04-02-2019 to 06-02-2019. The program was inaugurated by Principal Dr.T.Venkateswararo who expressed his gratitude to the speaker, for presenting a program conducted by the Department of Electrical & Electronics Engineering and placement cell.

Integrity refers to the quality of having strong ethical principles that are adhered to at all times. Examples of characteristics and skills associated with integrity explained by Resource person. Honesty, Trust, Consistency, Gratitude, Respect, Hardworking, Responsible, Helpful Patience

Integrity is also said to be about “doing the right thing” under all circumstances. Some examples of integrity skills and how integrity can be shown in everyday life are highlighted below. Remain honest with the people around you at all times. Do not share secrets and confidential information with people who should not hear it. Do not talk negatively about others when they are not around (gossiping). If you promise something, do it. Be honest when you make a mistake and admit it.

Do the right thing, even when people aren’t looking! Integrity skills in the workplace include acting with integrity when demonstrating core values. Show up for work on time, be ready to work and be honest and open in communicating with others. Hold yourself accountable for the work you do and what people do under you. Pay particular attention to this in leadership positions: the people under you are setting an example for you. The Ethical Leadership Model clearly shows the elements of ethical leadership and leadership with integrity. By adopting strong values and standards, employees are encouraged to do the same.

Benefits of having a high level of integrity in the workplace;

Having a workforce of integrity in an organization is worth its weight in gold. After all, it means a workforce that you can trust and build on. They don’t compromise when it comes to quality, ideals or honesty. They do not lie, cheat or steal. They behave according to the company’s code and exhibit equivalent values. Having integrity in relationships within a company creates strong ties with suppliers, customers and other stakeholders. Integral employees will not indulge in corruption and scandals are not swept under the rug. Achieving a perfectly honest organization is difficult, if not impossible. Nevertheless, this should always be the goal. Various measures can be taken to achieve this. One example is to discuss integrity dilemmas. This gives employees a chance to think about what is expected of them in certain situations and it also teaches them to recognize situations in practice where integrity is compromised.
